

IBP Recognized by David Weekley Homes as 2026 National Preferred Partner

June 23, 2026

COLUMBUS, Ohio--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Jun. 23, 2026-- Installed Building Products, Inc. (the "Company" or "IBP") (NYSE: IBP), an industry-leading installer of insulation and complementary building products, was recognized as a winner in David Weekley Homes' 22nd annual National Preferred Partner Survey.

For the sixth year in a row, IBP was one of 14 recipients in the "National Preferred Partner" category. David Weekley Homes analyzed 117 companies through a comprehensive survey and evaluation process that focused on world-class quality and customer service. Of those companies, only 23% were designated a National Preferred Partner.

"Receiving this recognition once again reflects the dedication our teams bring to their work every day," said Brad Wheeler, Chief Operating Officer of IBP. "Our people take pride in delivering quality workmanship and dependable service, and we're proud to be recognized by David Weekley Homes for those efforts."

This recognition comes at a time when reliable trade partners are increasingly important to the homebuilding industry. Builders continue to navigate labor and supply chain pressures while working to meet ongoing housing demand nationwide.

"Strong partnerships are at the core of how we operate, and being named a National Preferred Partner is meaningful confirmation that we're delivering on that promise," said Jeff Hire, President of External Affairs.

"Throughout our 50 years as a company, David Weekley Homes has set a high bar for our National Preferred Partners. IBP consistently exceeds those standards and strengthens that legacy with their outstanding quality and service," said John Schiegg, Vice President of Purchasing and Supply Chain Services for David Weekley Homes.
